

Martie Washington
Abuse in Later Life Program Coordinator

Martie Washington is the Abuse in Later Life Program Coordinator for the National Clearinghouse on Abuse in Later Life (NCALL), a project of End Domestic Abuse Wisconsin. In this role, Washington is responsible for overall coordination of training and technical assistance activities for the Office on Violence Against Women's Abuse in Later Life Grant Program recipients. She provides training to OVW grantees and other entities in the abuse in later life field, as well as work on special projects.

Washington has an extensive background in case management, grant development and management, public/behavioral health, and collaborative team development. These inter-agency teams developed and supported by Washington's technical assistance focused on topics including elder abuse, drug endangered children, domestic violence, and sexual violence. Washington has also developed and delivered multiple trainings both in-person and virtually addressing collaborative approaches and alliance development.

She graduated from the University of Rhode Island with a Bachelor of Arts in Sociology and has worked in the social services field in one capacity or another for almost 40 years. Washington currently lives and works in Nevada.
